Marley Elevator Man Found Dead By Daughter

Alex Haley, aged 64 years, life long resident of Marley and grain elevator owner of that village, died suddenly of heart disease Saturday morning.

Mr. Haley was engaged in loading a car of oats and had the car about two-thirds loaded when death overtook him. It is thought that the heat and over exertion brought on the fatal attack.

When Mr. Haley failed to come home for dinner at noon, his daughter Alice became worried and went to the elevator. She found her father lying on his back in the car of oats. From the position of the body it is thought Mr. Haley felt the attack coming on and tried to get out of the car but only got as far as the door when the end came.

Dr. McMahan, of Mokena, was summoned at once, but upon examination of the body said Mr. Haley had been dead apparently two hours before his lifeless body was found.

Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon from the late home to the Marley church, Rev. A. L. Brown officiating. The Ku Klux Klan, of which the deceased was a member had charge of the services at the grave in the Hadley cemetery. The last rites were attended by hundreds of neighbors and friends and the floral offerings were beautiful and profuse.

Mr. Haley is survived by his widow, one daughter Alice, one sister Mrs. Frank Savage and two brothers, Charles and George of Marley.

ANTON KRAUS LATE OF MOKENA DIED AT JOLIET OF PNEUMONIA

Anton Kraus, aged 50 years, a brother of G. M. Kraus of Mokena and who stayed with the latter for sometime, died Wednesday midnight in Joliet at his boarding place following an attack of pneumonia and liver trouble. He had been able to leave the hospital only a short time when he took a turn for the worse.

He is survived by three brothers, George M., of Mokena, Richard of Aurora and William of Hannibal, Mo., and one sister. He had formerly resided in Chicago where his wife died several years ago.

Funeral Friday from the McCann Undertaking rooms at 2 o'clock. Interment in the St. Lucas cemetery, Chicago.

SPIRIT OF KINDNESS

IS STILL ALIVE

The spirit of kindness which is not shown as often as it should be, is not dead as was shown one day last week when a rather touching incident took place. Some people from Chicago have been in the habit of visiting a relative at Oak Forest for sometime but after the death of this relative they still came out to visit other patients at the Infirmary. They took pity on three helpless young women ranging in age from 17 to 20 years and took them out for an auto ride to Tinley Park where they bought ice cream and candy at the Cavallini ice cream parlor and fed the frozen dainties and sweets to the young ladies who are totally helpless and unable to feed themselves. They have been in this condition for many years and have been at the Infirmary for seven years.

This spirit of kindness is surely very commendable.

Mokena School Opens With 127 Pupils Enrolled

The Mokena public school opened Tuesday morning with an enrollment of 127 pupils. The teachers are: Principal, A. L. Brown; Miss Darling, upper grades; Miss Jones, intermediate; Miss Norton, primary.

Golden Milestone Passed By Tinley Park Couple Sun.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Vogt, Sr., of Tinley Park have enjoyed the felicity of half a century of wedded bliss and in commemoration of this event an elaborate golden wedding anniversary was celebrated at their home in Tinley Park last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Vogt are 72 years old and have lived in the same neighborhood all of their lives.

Mr. Vogt is a pioneer business man of Tinley Park, starting in the general store business in Tinley Park in 1872. At that time the village was known as Bremen.

Mr. Vogt put in much hard work but was rewarded with a fine business patronage and built up an excellent business. After forty years of activity in the store business, he retired in 1912 and turned the business over to his son Henry C. He is following in his father's footsteps and is enjoying an excellent trade.

Mr. Vogt was married in 1874 to Miss Mathilda Wille. At the celebration held last Sunday all the members of the family were present together with the grandchildren. The family consists of Mr. and Mrs. C. and five daughters as follows: Mrs. W. H. Nielsen, Mrs. F. G. Funk of Chicago; Mrs. Bert Fulton, Mrs. George Lorenz of Tinley Park; Mrs. Herman Grosskopf of Blue Island.

A sumptuous dinner and supper was served and the honored couple were presented with many gifts befitting the occasion. In the afternoon a group picture of the family and guests was taken by Mr. Ford-tram of Blue Island.

Mr. and Mrs. Vogt renewed the marriage vows they made 50 years ago, Rev. A. Buddenhagen of the Zion Lutheran church officiating. The groom was presented with a gold headed cane, while the bride received a gold handled umbrella and a set of dishes from the children and grand children.

In the evening a big shivaree was held, reminding the honored couple of the first serenade accorded them 50 years ago.

Time has dealt lightly with them in the years that have flown and they are both quite active and enjoy life. Their hosts of friends unite in congratulating them upon reaching this golden milestone in their life's journey and wish them many more years of life and happiness. (Photos courtesy Herald Examiner)

MRS. G. DINI OF TINLEY PARK BURNT BY LYE

Mrs. G. Dini, who is in charge of the Cavallini ice cream parlor at Tinley Park, was the victim of a peculiar accident last week. She had been doing some cleaning about the soda fountain and had used a half can of lye to clean out a drain pipe. In some manner, the lye solution splashed in her face, burning it and the left eye quite badly. She was confined to her bed for a few days but has recovered from the burns.

AUTO UPSETS IN DITCH; TWO MEN INJURED

Sunday noon a Buick car containing five passengers was upset in the ditch near the Hohenstein school east of Mokena on the Tinley Park road. This road has been freshly dressed with crushed stone and it seems the loose stone caused the car to slide and sent it to the ditch.

The driver, a young man from Posen, was the only member of the party sustaining serious injury. He suffered a bad cut on his right wrist and arm. A Mr. Snieder of Chicago, said to have been the owner of the car, was slightly cut about the head. Two young women and another man who were in the party escaped injury. The injured ones were taken to the office of Dr. Ickstadt in Tinley Park, who dressed their wounds.

The car was badly smashed and was taken to the Koehler Bros. Garage at Goessleville, for repairs.

ALBERT ICKSTADT TAKES M. S. DEGREE AT CHI. U.

Albert Ickstadt, son of Dr. and Mrs. Ickstadt of Tinley Park, who has been studying medicine the past four years, and who last year received his Bachelor of Science degree at the University of Chicago, was honored with the Master of Science degree which was conferred upon him at Mandel Hall at the University of Chicago, last Friday night when 500 students took their degrees. This was quite an honor for Mr. Ickstadt to receive two degrees within a year. He is preparing to enter Rush Medical College in Chicago, this quarter.

REV. ZEUNER OF TINLEY PARK GERMAN M. E. GOES TO WIS. CHARGE

Rev. Mr. Zeuner, pastor of the Tinley Park German M. E. Church, has returned from the annual conference of his denomination with the news that he is to be transferred to a charge in Wisconsin and will move next week. Rev. Zeuner has been in charge of the Tinley Park church for several years and has built up a fine congregation. His many friends are sorry to see him leave, but wish him much success in his new field.

Glaring Headlights Cause Serious Accident At Mokena

Glaring headlights on an auto were the cause of a serious auto accident in Mokena Saturday night when Albert Lorenz of Joliet who was driving west on Front street was blinded by the strong lights of an auto going in the opposite direction and as a result crashed in to a tree in front of the Emil P. Krapp residence. The auto was badly wrecked. It was very fortunate Mr. Lorenz and a companion with him were not injured. The tree was badly cut big pieces of bark being peeled from the tree trunk.

BUYS BIG STOCK OF SHOES

Walter Fisher, Mokena shoe dealer and merchant has just returned from Milwaukee where he purchased a big stock of shoes for his fall and winter trade.

TEMPORARY INJUNCTION ASKED FOR ROAD HOUSE

A temporary injunction has been issued by Judge Hill in the circuit court against the operators and owners of the Wayside Inn, a road-house located on the Lincoln highway, east of Frankfort, enjoining them from further storage or sale of intoxicating liquor.

This writ was issued upon the petition of State's Attorney Martin, as a consequence of the raid on this roadside cafe last Saturday night by Sheriff Walker.

A quantity of beer which tested 4 percent alcohol was seized, and Cecelia Collins, the proprietor, and Robert Durnion, her bartender and porter, were taken into custody.

The petition for injunction names the Collins woman, and Tony Augustino and Delphine Augustino as defendants, the last two named as the owners of the property.

Augustino rented the place to the Collins woman. She has been held over to the county court on a charge of violating the prohibition law and is at liberty under bonds of $2,000. A hearing has been set for Sept. 12, at which it will be decided shall remain in force pending further hearing at which time the state will ask to have it made permanent.

A permanent injunction would close the property a year from the date of the decree for all purposes.

This is the third injunction to be asked for a road house in the past two months. State's Attorney Martin is striving to close two road-houses in Washington township by this method.

SEPARATOR CATCHES ON FIRE AND A $5000 FIRE FOLLOWS

A serious fire broke out on the George Bettenhausen farm, west of Tinley Park, Friday afternoon about 3 o'clock. A barn, threshing machine and a large straw stack were destroyed.

Mr. Bettenhausen and a number of men were busy running a threshing machine. The last bundle from the last wagon load of oats had just gone into the separator, when suddenly a stream of burning straw was emitted from the blower pipe right on to the straw stack. Quick as a flash the big straw stack was ignited and the flames spread so quickly that there was no chance whatever to check them. The gasoline tractor which was pulling the separator was run off into the field but the flames gained headway so rapidly that there was no chance to move the separator which quickly caught fire and all parts of the machine which were not of metal were quickly burned. As the straw stack was adjoining a large barn, this building also caught fire and fell prey to the flames. Luckily no stock was in the barn at the time.

Over 700 bushels of oats, besides the entire season's hay crop, was in the barn and this, with other contents of the barn, were burned. The loss is estimated at about $5,000 or $6,000, partly covered by insurance. The threshing machine was valued at about $1500. It was a Case machine. A hot box in the separator is thought to have caused the fire.

Farmers on nearby farms saw the fire and hurried to the Bettenhausen farm, but as there was no fire protection of any kind on the farm, nothing could be done.

Luckily the wind was blowing from the southwest. This carried the flames into the field. Had the wind shifted to the northeast, the dwelling and grainery would also have been destroyed, as they would have been directly in the path of the flames.

Christ Yunker Is Surprised on His 74th Natal Day

Christ Yunker, formerly of Orland, but who has been a resident of Mokena for the past 18 years, was delightfully surprised on his 74th birthday anniversary, Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Yunker had been invited out to the Fred Hinspeter home for dinner, but when the Cappel grove was reached they were taken there and great was Mr. Yunker's surprise to find a great family reunion in progress. Greater still was his surprise when he learned that the gathering was in honor of his 74th birthday anniversary.

A long table was set and a sumptuous dinner was served. The table was prettily decorated with flowers.

Following dinner, games were played and other sports were enjoyed. About 60 guests, all members of the family, were present. All but two of Mr. and Mrs. Yunker's 11 children were present, all but 6 out of 37 grand children, and all but 1 out of 6 great grandchildren were present, as also were guests from Orland, Tinley Park, Frankfort and Joliet.

Mr. Yunker was presented with many gifts. He resided on a farm in Orland for 35 years before retiring and locating in Mokena.

The many friends of Mr. Yunker hope that he will live to enjoy many more of these happy occasions.

Cook County Connects UP

Orland and Mokena With New Macadam Road

For many years the highway between Mokena and Orland has been almost impassable. On account of a mile of mud road between the two towns. After much delay this road is at last being macadamized by the Cook County Highway department so that at last a continuous stone road will connect Orland and Frankfort townships.

The county has a large force of men and trucks engaged in hauling the stone from the Rock Island tracks at Tinley Park. A steam shovel mounted on a motor truck is used in unloading the stone from the cars into the trucks. Last Saturday a record for unloading was established when a carload of stone was unloaded in forty minutes.

MOKENA WINS 11 TO 3

Mokena beat Tinley Park ball team 11-3 last Sunday. Mokena is to play New Lenox this Sunday.

Mokena City Dad Arrested; Charge Reckless Driving

According to the Chicago Heights police, Edward Schenkel, Mokena alderman, was arrested in that city Sunday night, charged with reckless driving. According to the information filed, Schenkel collided with another car driven by a Joliet man. Both cars were damaged.

Alderman Schenkel was taken to the Chicago Heights police station where he was held until he put up a cash bond. His case was called before Judge Zeller Monday morning and he was fined $40 and costs, making a total of $43.75. He also agreed to pay the damages done to the Joliet man's car.

Chicagoan Buys Former Maltby Farms For $32,000

Morris Siegel, who is connected with the Flying Squad of the Cook County Sheriff's office, has purchased the former Maltby farms north of Mokena for a consideration of $32,000. Mr. Siegel it is said is the owner of eight farms and that he will place a local manager on the Mokena farms. He also intends to put a large herd of cattle on these farms it is said. In addition Mr. Siegel contemplates erecting new buildings either for sale or rent it is reported. He also has his eye on certain properties in the village with the view of erecting new buildings thereon.

This is what Mokena needs. It takes good live outsiders to come into this town and make something out of it. Mokena has the finest chance in the world to become a real live town if live energetic business men can be induced to locate here and build it up. When this happens the old spirit of Mokena will be good enough 100 years ago, is good enough today, will be up rooted and a real spirit of progress will spring up in its place.

The former Maltby farms were at one time in line for a real estate boom when Ben Marti had some land laid out in lots and opened Marti's sub-division, but for some reason or other, the project never amounted to anything.

HOLD FAREWELL PARTY

The congregation of the Immanuel Lutheran church of Mokena held a farewell party in the church parlors in honor of Rev. and Mrs. W. J. Kemnitz Thursday evening. Bunco was the chief diversion, those winning prizes presented them in turn to Rev. and Mrs. Kemnitz.

Odd Things That Happen

A London paper draws attention to two odd things that have recently happened at sea which must make an appeal even to a dull imagination.

One was a collision between an airplane and a steamer; the other was a curious case of damage to an airplane rising over the Dorset coast. The damage was first seen from land and was notified to the pilot in the sky by a wireless message. The pilot was instructed to make for the sea and land in shallow water, which he did, being picked up by a rowing boat.

The number of pupils enrolled in public high schools in the United States increased from 1,156,995 in 1871 to 2,181,216 in 1920.

OVERCOMING MISFORTUNE

MISFORTUNE, which crushes some, stimulates others to greater effort. Shakespeare makes Cassius say, "The fault, dear Brutus, is not with our stars, but with ourselves."

The newspapers recently told of a tragic occurrence in one of our great cities. A prosperous baker, who had invested his savings in city real estate, died several years ago, leaving three children, all grown. The daughter was normal, but the two sons had been blind since early childhood. The daughter carried on the business and took care of her two blind brothers. The three lived much to themselves, the men never going out of the house without the sister to guide them.

Recently, the neighbors noticed that the house was closed and apparently deserted. After waiting a week, the police broke in to find the sister dead on the floor, apparently from heart disease, and the two brothers dead from starvation. With money in the bank and valuable real estate in their possession, they died for lack of food because they were totally dependent on their sister and had never learned to care for themselves.

The same papers contained an account of a young man of twenty-four, also blind from childhood, who had passed the state bar examination and graduated from law school with high honors.

One man conquered his affliction. The other men were conquered by it.

Blind men have won success and reputation in many lines. Prescott, the historian, was blind during the greater part of his life. Senator Gore of Oklahoma has been blind for years. One of the leading physicians of Chicago lost his eyesight in boyhood, yet he went through college and medical school, graduated with honors, and is today an authority on heart disease, recognized as such all over the country. These men did not succumb because they were blind, but in spite of it.

One man loses his sight and becomes a beggar. Another meets the same misfortune, overcomes it, and becomes a successful man.

A boy born without arms, who learned to write with his toes, recently took a prize as a penman. A girl born without arms learned to write, sew, comb her hair, and dress herself with her toes. She graduated this year from Vassar.

Are you handicapped in any way? Don't give up to misfortune. Learn to overcome it. Others have done it and so can you.

SAVE THE BABY'S NECK

STAMPING out tuberculosis is saving our babies' necks.

Tuberculosis may affect any part of the body. In former years, tuberculosis of the lungs was called consumption, because the lung tissue was consumed or destroyed, and great cavities formed in these organs.

Tuberculosis of the skin was called lupus, or wolf, because the skin became reddish brown, like a wolf's coat.

Tuberculosis of the glands was called scrofula. In England, it was for centuries called King's Evil, because it was believed that it could be cured by the touch of the king. So thousands of scrofulous children were brought to the king for cure.

Some of these children recovered or improved, because they were carried by their parents for days or even weeks from their homes all over England to London and so got fresh air and sunlight, which they never would have had otherwise.

But it wasn't the king's touch that cured them. King William of Orange, who, with his wife Mary, ruled England from 1688 to 1702, was the last English king who touched for the disease and evidently he had little faith in his ability to cure. To one man whom he touched he said, "God give you good health and better sense."

After Koch discovered the germ of tuberculosis in 1882, it was found that scrofula in the glands, lupus in the skin, and consumption in the lungs were all different forms of the same disease. For twenty years more, surgeons treated scrofula by removing the diseased, broken-down glands and draining the abscesses which had formed. This left ugly scars.

Tubercular glands in the neck were common in all hospitals, dispensaries and surgical clinics. Then it was found that this condition was caused by milk from tubercular cows. This danger could be removed by pasteurizing the milk.

Today, 95 per cent of the milk used in large cities is pasteurized. As soon as all the milk for our large cities was pasteurized, cases of gland tuberculosis began to decrease.

Then our national and state agricultural departments started a systematic fight against tuberculosis in cattle and the disease decreased still more. So now it is comparatively rare.

This is not only a good thing for the cattle, but it is also a better thing for our babies.

No tubercular cows, no tubercular milk. No raw milk, no gland tuberculosis in babies.

DANGER AND SAFETY

Nick and Nancy had been talking about it for a long time. Somehow or other, when evening came, and Daddy had told them his story, they had forgotten to ask the question they had been meaning to ask for some time.

But this evening they asked it at once.

"Daddy," said Nancy, "something has been bothering us. We want to ask you about it."

"Yes," chimed in Nick, "we have been meaning to ask you this for ages."

"Well, then, we'd better hear what it is without any delay," said Daddy. "So we can see if we can answer it."

"It is always a very nervous moment when a question is forthcoming for fear it can't be answered, but if it can't we will do all we can to find out the answer."

Nick and Nancy smiled. Daddy did seem to be able to understand a very great deal, but they loved it because he didn't mind saying that he didn't quite understand about something himself and would have to look it up with them.

"Well, what is the question?" Daddy asked.

"We wanted to know," Nick said, "how it is birds can sit along the wires of trolley cars, and upon telegraph wires which would be dangerous for us to touch?"

"They sit along them in rows and they don't seem to be hurt—yet the wires are supposed to be so dangerous, and if messages were being sent along there would be electric currents which would kill them."

"Yet they aren't killed."

"Good!" exclaimed Daddy. "I know the answer to that one."

"As a matter of fact I have been meaning to tell you about this for some time, too, just as you have been meaning to ask me about it."

"You see, I heard that a few letters had been received at different times asking just how that could be. It seems to be something to puzzle many people, and I really don't wonder."

"When messages are being sent there is an electric current through the wires which is strong and dangerous enough to kill people, should they get up and touch those wires."

"Of course people never do that, for anyone knows it is always the wisest thing to keep away from unfamiliar wires."

"But the electric current is strong enough to do harm if the people were in search of harm."

"Yet we see many birds, smaller by far than people, and their little bodies seem quite safe, and we notice them flying away afterward."

"It is because they are on the wires and no part of them is on the ground."

Birds Sit Upon the Wires.

"If they were touching the poles of the earth at the same time they would be killed."

"In order to do this the current must go along through the body of the bird or of a human being to the ground. That is the connection there must be to have harm come from the electrical current."

"The connection with the ground need not be direct. If a person were upon a pole and the pole was in the ground and then touched the wire, the danger would be just as great, as there would be that ground connection."

"If a person could perch upon wires as birds do there would be no danger. But if they should touch anything that in any way went near the ground, there would be danger."

"But birds sit upon the wires and there is no ground connection whatever, and so they are safe."

"Well," said Nick, "I'm glad to know the reason why at last."

"And so am I," said Nancy. "You've no idea how this has puzzled us."

CHANGING CUSTOMS

I HAVE seen a good many statements within the last few months to the effect that our young people are degenerating, that the moral standards of girls especially are lower than they were, and that youth is going to the dogs generally. I have seen as many young people as the next man, and I don't believe it.

It is simply that girls are more frank than they were a generation ago; they are more open, they conceal less—they, in fact, conceal very little, either physical or emotional. The older generation of women may have had a good many questionable things go through their minds, but they were discreet; they thought under the cover of darkness; they seldom gave anything away.

In our grandmothers' day the mysteries of life were never discussed; they were not nice. The privacies of the feminine toilet were inviolate and beyond the knowledge and the experience of man. Things are different now.

In a public restaurant early one morning not long ago, while waiting for a train, I sat near a young girl and her fiancé, as I gathered from the conversation that drifted to me. She was a pretty girl, tastefully gowned. Her voice was soft and her speech correct and refined. It was early morning, as I have said, and she was to take a train, as I was. She had had none too much time, I presume, for arraying herself properly.

The male member of the combination, true to type, addressed himself pretty completely to his bacon and the morning paper. The young woman, attention to her toilet, with as little embarrassment as a careful chauffeur starting on a journey might have gone over his car to see that the battery had water in it, that there was oil in the differential, gas in the tank, the carpet brushed and the body of the car properly polished.

From a bag of tools, which all careful young women now carry with them wherever they go, she got out the paraphernalia for putting her nails into condition. There is nothing more irritating than a dangling hang-nail. Then the lip-stick was generously applied and the edges of the rouge blotch on her powdered cheek softened a little. I should not have been surprised or shocked—nor would her companion, I think—if she had given her teeth the once over, and screwed on a pair of earrings, or adjusted a transformation dragged from the recesses of her tool box. But her friend had finished his breakfast at this stage of the proceedings and she had no time for further details. As I said, I don't believe that young people innately are particularly different from what they were in our grandmothers' time. It is just that customs are changing.

THE ROLLING STONE

WHEN Erwin was twenty-four he married and his father settled him on a little farm, reasonably well-stocked, and started him out in what seemed to be a prosperous career.

The boy had a good mind and a strong, healthy body; he was somewhat better educated than the fellows of his acquaintance, he was not afraid of work and he was absolutely honest and dependable. The girl whom he married was capable, intelligent and loyal to him in the extreme.

But Erwin was not satisfied. He wanted a bigger place, so he sold his farm shortly for less than it was worth and moved to Texas. The soil was gummy, his crops burned up, his two children were malarial, and he came back within a year or so, richer in experience but poorer in pocket.

He decided to give up farming and bought a little store in the village near which he had lived. He soon saw, however, that he was no storekeeper. He had been brought up on the farm and farming was the only game he knew, so he disposed of the store and rented a large farm which he was to manage on shares. Disaster pursued him, his stock died, the place was more than he could manage, and just as he was getting things in hand to make a little money he decided to move back to town and run a grain elevator and sell farming implements.

This was not a bad venture. He had a wide circle of friends and acquaintances, he was a practical machinist and he soon began to prosper. But his boys were growing up, there was little for them to do, the responsibilities of the new business weighed on him tremendously. He sold out and bought a farm in Minnesota, only to find that his boys did not care for farming.

That was twenty years ago, when he was past fifty. He has tried a dozen ventures since then—always working hard, always hopeful, always changing at a loss with the expectation that the next move would put him on his feet and make his fortune. Now, at seventy-four, his strength gone, his ambitions cooled, he is poorer than he was fifty years ago. The farm that he sold at that time is worth today ten times more than he received for it.

It takes courage to stick to a task that is difficult and ungenial, no matter what it is; adjacent pastures often seem greener than our own; the other man's job has its deceitful attractions, but whoever gets anywhere must stick with persistence to the road, even when it leads him through muddy swamps and over tedious hills.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound
Helps to Restore Health

A great many letters similar to the following recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a wonderful medicine for bringing the new mother back to normal health and strength.

It is an excellent restorative, contains no harmful drugs, and can be taken in safety by a nursing mother. Thousands of mothers who have regained their strength by taking it are its best recommendation. Why not take it yourself?

Now Well Again

Milwaukee, Wisconsin.—"After I had my second child I felt sick and nervous and could not do much. Then after the other baby came I was worse than ever. I suffered this way for a long time and did not know what to do. I was looking over my cook books, and found one of your little books and I sat down and read every page. Then I bought a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and took four bottles of it before I stopped, and now I am well again. I always recommend the Vegetable Compound to my friends."

—Mrs. JOHN MITZKE, 773 8th Ave., Milwaukee, Wis.

Buffalo, N. Y.—"My health got worse after my little girl's birth, and my mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as it had done her so much good. I had headaches and tired feelings, with no ambition, also pains at times so it hurt me to walk. With the Vegetable Compound I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine and used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash, and I have been greatly helped. I do hope you will use my letter as a testimonial as it will help other women."—Mrs. GEORGE SHOEMAKER, 349 Emslie St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Followed Friend's Advice

Vienna, South Dakota.—"After my second child was born I was completely run-down and didn't care for anything. I had sharp pains in my sides and a white discharge and was nervous and weak. I didn't seem to care how I neglected my work. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took it for two months the first time and one month the last time. It has helped me in a great many ways and the pains have left me entirely. I certainly wish you to know how much benefit I have received."—Mrs. G. W. FREEMAN, Vienna, South Dakota.

Such letters and a successful record of fifty years should convince every ailing woman that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the medicine she needs. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Sure of His Position

Congressman Blather was a passenger on the steamship Sieve, which was slowly sinking. The passengers were climbing into the lifeboats. "Congressman," suggested a reporter aboard the ill-fated craft, "here's a chance for some publicity. If you cared—" "You may quote me as saying," replied the statesman, "that I am heartily in favor of a back-to-the-land movement."—American Legion Weekly.

Valuable Tea Set

A tea set, more than 200 years old, is carefully cherished by Mrs. Hampton B. Miller of Alfred, Maine. The set is complete, having 12 of the usual group articles, with the larger piece intact. It is blue-white china, with willow blue stripe and blue polka dots all over the surface, and was originally the property of Mrs. Merrill's great-great-grandmother and has been handed down to the oldest girl of each generation on her wedding day.

Brewery Still

Under Guard

A temporary injunction was granted in United States district court last Friday against a semi-underground brewery about a mile and a half north of Frankfort, Ill. Judge Cliffe took the plea of the government for summary destruction of the property under advisement.

Operators of the plant, according to the government, ran away when the premises were raided about a week ago upon information from a private citizen. The government in its bill was unable to identify all the operators but asked for an injunction against the premises. John Doe, Richard Roe and a man designated as McNichols.

McNichols, is understood by the government to be the owner of the premises, but has not been traced since the raid.

The government represented that a federal agent found a fully equipped brewery and beer valued at $20,000 in the hollowed side of a hill in a clump of timber.

ORLAND

Mayor Ratschke of Orland, and the village board of that town are at loggerheads because Al Hentsch, local motorcycle cop, will not stay "canned." Mayor Ratschke says Hentsch is fired but the board says he is not, so as a result he is still on duty. The board holds that the mayor cannot fire or hire anyone without the consent of that body and as the board is satisfied with the services of motorcycle policeman Hentsch, they feel he should be retained on the village payroll. It is said that Mayor Ratschke has refused to sign the voucher for last month's pay due the motorcycle cop. And so the battle rages!!!

The picnic held by the Orland Catholic Church at the Raney Grove Labor Day was well patronized despite the bad weather.

While Mrs. Steven Nemeth was driving past the Raney Grove Labor Day, Milton Esche, who was coming out of the grove, collided with her car. Both cars were badly damaged but luckily no one was injured. Just who was to blame for the accident has not been established.

Mrs. R. M. Cooper, who has been holding special sales to dispose of the store stock of her late husband, is going to close out the remaining stock at public auction next Thursday morning, Sept. 11 at 10 o'clock.

Don't forget the Entre Nous Club dance to be held at the Raney Grove on Saturday night, Sept. 13. Music by Bob Pierce orchestra.

Orland high school, Miss Dorothy Davis, principal, opened Tuesday with 23 pupils enrolled.

The Christ Luth. parochial school opened Tuesday with 23 pupils.

Services at Christ Luth. church will be in German. The evening service will be in English with the communion.

Mrs. L. Nicolai was taken seriously ill Monday, but is much improved.

NEW LENOX

A very pretty wedding of Miss Inez Lynette Holmes of New Lenox and Charles Baker O'Donnell son of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen O'Donnell of Joliet took place last Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the New Lenox Methodist church with Rev. Hamilton, pastor of the church officiating.

Promptly at the appointed hour the bridal party proceeded to the altar which was beautiful in bowers of lavender and white phlox.

The bride was gowned in white georgette with a tulle veil arranged in cap effect and carried an arm bouquet of sweetheart roses.

Miss Edith Wilson and Miss Margaret Doig, the bridesmaids, were gowned in orchid georgette and white lace and wore corsage bouquets. Edward O'Donnell and Robert Stewart of Joliet served as groomsmen. Little Margaret Beadle acted as flower girl and dressed in white crepe scattered orchid and white asters from a small basket. Miss Marion Lockwood presided at the piano and Miss Leila Hendrickson sang "At Dawning".

A wedding dinner was served at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Beadle in New Lenox after which Mr. and Mrs. O'Donnell left for the Dells of Wisconsin.

Mr. O'Donnell is employed as a machinist at the American Steel and Wire Co., and Mrs. O'Donnell is employed at the Rock Island railroad offices at Englewood.

They will make their home at the corner of Stevens avenue and Cass street.

Miss Bruce and Miss Carrie Bentley are the teachers in the New Lenox public school this year.

Mrs. Storm, who taught here last year is this year teaching in the Carey school in Harvey, Ill., a school in which Miss Phoebe Carey is sister of Mrs. Storm, taught.

A paved street in New Lenox is the talk of the day now for the concrete road was opened officially Sunday and the cars now go sailing by. That is what comes of dreaming sometimes, as at one time it was somebody's dream, and we all wonder what the old time residents who lived here 50 years ago, would say if they could see the old town now?

The Ladies Aid of the Methodist church met at the church on Wednesday afternoon, in business session.

John and Ruth Swinson, children of Mr. and Mrs. John Swinson are ill with Scarlet Fever as also is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Woeltje. Mr. Chas. Cooper is ill with diphtheria.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin and Mrs. Neil of Chicago spent Monday at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Hamilton.

The Ku Klux Klan met at the Grange hall on Thursday evening. Sunday night will be the first number on the Fall program of the Sunday evening club when Senator Kessinger of Aurora will speak.

WORTH

WORTH METHODIST CHURCH

The pastor, Rev. John K. Benedict, preached his last sermon at the Worth Church last Sunday. He has received an appointment to undertake community organization and religious educational work in Greystone Park district in the suburbs of Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and will take up his duties there at once, serving under the Milwaukee Methodist Union.

In transferring to other fields of service, the retiring pastor wishes to thank the people of Worth for their many kindnesses and to express his appreciation to all those who have so faithfully supported the work during the past year. His thoughts and prayers will always go with the Worth Church and its people and it is his earnest wish that this coming year will be, for them, one of great spiritual blessing and progress in the work of God.

During the remaining weeks of this Conference year, the pulpit will be supplied by Rev. V. J. Smith, a former Garrett student. He is expected to receive a cordial welcome and is a man who is worthy of the hearty support of the people.

Last Sunday evening, Mr. Dan Singh, a student from India, delivered a lecture at the church on "India To-day." His lecture was illustrated by sixty stereopticon slides and was much enjoyed.

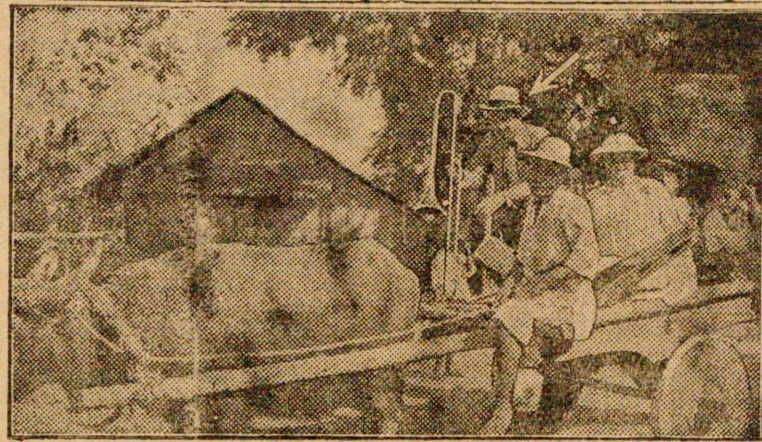

The young people are considering the organization of an Epworth League very soon.

The Company Invites Customers' Questions

No. 12 in a series of statements about the Company's business.

The Pink Ticket Plan

EMPLOYEES in the Company stores or offices have access to information sources, but the meter reader, serviceman, salesman or other employee whose work is outside, is not prepared always to answer questions or to take care of requests unrelated to his immediate duties.

So to make certain that you or any other customer will receive such authoritative information as may be desired about the Company's organization, operation or business, the Pink Ticket Plan was adopted.

Employees of the Company carry Pink Tickets with them at all times, in and out of regular working hours. This Pink Ticket is an especially designed question form printed on pink paper.

If an employee of the Company calls at your home or store, or if you meet him on the street or elsewhere around town and you ask a question which he does not feel prepared to answer offhand, or if you make a request which he personally cannot take care of, the Pink Ticket comes into operation.

The employee writes your question or request on a Pink Ticket and despatches it direct to the proper department manager. This department manager takes an immediate personal interest in answering your question or acting upon your request.

This Pink Ticket Plan relieves you from the possible necessity of writing a letter or using the telephone. It insures prompt action and it was designed for your convenience.

Any employee of the Company, in or out of regular working hours, will gladly receive requests for information, comments or service suggestions.

Lightning and Fires

Lightning is the chief cause of this country's forest fires. One series of thunderstorms a few years ago started 48 fires in a single forest in six days. Next in order to lightning as an agency of forest destruction are careless campers.

News of the Week Cut Down for Busy Readers

Washington—

Secretary Weeks rejected the bid of $600,000 made by the Hoboken (N. J.) Land and Improvement company for water front properties which the War department recently advertised for sale.

Two army airmen, Lieut. L. L. Koonz and Private Walter F. Goggin, jumped in parachutes from a disabled plane and landed safely on Bolling field, Washington. The plane went into a tailspin at a 3,000-foot level.

The financial position of farmers, as measured by the exchange values of their products for nonagricultural commodities, is gradually working toward a prewar parity, according to the agricultural review, issued by the Department of Agriculture.

Deductions from income taxes because of losses sustained when prohibition went into effect are being claimed before the new board of tax appeals by liquor interests.

The Department of Justice has started an investigation into the death recently in Butte, Mont., of W. W. Rae, a government witness against Senator Wheeler (Dem.) of Montana. Conflicting versions of the death have been received.

Prohibition Commissioner Roy A. Haynes issued a statement in which he claimed a "large increase in accomplishments" during the past July, compared to last year.

Political—

United States Senator Nathaniel B. Dial apparently was defeated for renomination in the South Carolina Democratic primary, and a second primary probably will be necessary to decide whether the nomination is to go to former Gov. Cole L. Blease or Representative James F. Byrnes.

William M. Butler, Republican national chairman, picked John T. Adams of Iowa, Mr. Butler's immediate predecessor as national chairman, to head the party's advisory committee. Second in line is C. Bascom Slemm, White House secretary and committeeman from Virginia.

Domestic—

Escorted by airplanes, greeted by the sirens of hundreds of passing vessels, the prince of Wales entered New York harbor aboard the liner Berengaria. He went to Washington on a special train and after a private lunch with President and Mrs. Coolidge, returned to Syosset, L. I., his home while in the East.

Legend of Unicorn

Medieval conception of the unicorn as possessing great strength and fierceness may have been partly due to the fact that in certain passages of the Old Testament, the word I'em (translated in the authorized version, unicorn), refers to a two-horned animal, savage and quarrelsome, subdued to gentleness only at the side of a virgin. The idea of purity is included in the significance of the unicorn in many coats of arms.

BACK ACHY?

Lame and achy in the morning? Tortured with backache all day long? No wonder you feel worn out and discouraged! But have you given any thought to your kidneys? Weak kidneys cause just such troubles; and you are likely to have headaches, too, with dizziness, stabbing pains and other kidney irregularities. Don't risk neglect! Use Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic to the kidneys. Doan's have helped thousands. They should help you. Ask your neighbor!

A Michigan Case

Mrs. H. Gutsch, N. Huron Ave., Harbor Beach, Mich., says: "A dull ache across my back kept me in constant misery and at night my back ached so I couldn't rest. When I got up in the morning I felt tired. My kidneys acted irregularly. Dizzy spells came over me and I would fall over. A friend advised me to try Doan's Pills, which I did. Three boxes cured me entirely."

TALE WITH THRILLS

Here's a good sea yarn—as good as one of W. Clark Russell's old-time stories, and with the advantage of being modern. It opens with a mysterious murder and the securing of valuable papers by the villain, masquerading as a rich man's secretary. Thereupon the rich man and one of his daughters hastily start on a mysterious journey, its destination an island in the South Atlantic. The rich man's wife and his other daughter follow soon after. The captain's safe is robbed of his sealed orders. Dirty work in the fore-castle and all over the ship. Mutiny, marooning and shanghaiing. A mysterious island that contains no gold, but something far more important than pirate's cave or treasure cache.

And love! Why, the rich man's son is in love with an actress, to the father's great indignation. One daughter is in love with a young man working on one of her father's docks. The other falls in love with an English lord who gets mixed up in the affair—a regular fighting son-of-a-gun. In the end six young and wildly beating hearts are made happy. The joke is that all three marriages are better than their wealthy and ambitious fathers and mothers could have hoped for.

And, by the way, the author, Crittenden Marriott—who is he? It's a new name, but it's dollars to doughnuts that he is some experienced spinner of yarns under a pen name. Certainly he writes like a skilled craftsman.

CHAPTER I

On a Dark Road

The trolley station at Curwen is small, consisting only of a closed-in shed with a single bench against its rear wall and a line of gimerack, jagged scroll leaves overhanging its open front. On a dark night it is almost invisible and is practically nonexistent. It was well after ten on an evening in late October when a buggy, drawn by a hard-driven horse and containing a single occupant, approached the station. The man who was driving continually peered ahead, in the manner of one trying to recognize some landmark that may tell him where he is. When he saw the rectangular bulk of Curwen station against the sky line, he leaned out, endeavoring to distinguish the white letters that spelled the name. Failing to do this, he threw back the lap robe and prepared to get out and inspect them more closely.

Midway in the move, however, he was stopped by the sudden siren shriek of an automobile that was coming up behind. He turned and looked through the glass-paneled peephole in the back of the buggy and saw two great acetylene lamps splitting space with terrifying speed. Instantly he shook his reins and tried to draw out to the side of the road. He did not really doubt that the hastening chauffeur behind would slow down in time to prevent a crash. And yet that raucous shriek had sounded very imperative. Again he urged his tired horse.

The car did not halt, nor even slacken speed. Too late he realized that it would not or could not slacken. But his nerve was good; not till the very last possible second did he abandon his seat and leap for safety. As he did so, a cry rang out, the auto veered and plunged outward, away from him. Its rear wheels, skidding, struck his buggy and hurled it forward against the horse. Its front wheels climbed the ridge that bordered the road and the whole great machine dived downward toward the river, with a roar of throbbing engines, flying pebbles and whirling wheels. Staggering from his leap, he caught a glimpse of a dark form hurtling through the moonshine to the earth, and of the great automobile plunging into the water.

As he stared, shaken by the suddenness of it all, a beam of light switched past him and he realized that the door of a house, till then unseen, had been thrown open, letting out a white glare, and that a woman was calling to know whether anyone was hurt.

He laughed shortly. "Anybody hurt?" he echoed. "He ought to be, if he isn't. He ought to be dead. Bring a light, will you?" He plunged down the bank toward the spot where he had seen the dark form hurled from the automobile. As he went, his eyes roved over the river, seeking the automobile, but the placid surface of the stream was unbroken, as if the machine had never plunged into it.

A moment later he reached the bottom of the slope and bent over the body of a man, whose huddled and bent form bespoke serious injury if not death. As he stooped, however, a groan told him that life was at least not extinct. The next moment the glimmer of yellow light that had been increasing behind him became stronger, as if the bearer had removed a sheltering hand from before it. Its beams fell upon the wounded man, disclosing a ghastly wound across the brow.

He looked up. The light came from a lamp carried by a girl, whose face showed dimly in the gloom. The lamp itself, he noticed, was trembling slightly, perhaps from the haste with which the girl had brought it and perhaps from the shock of the occurrence. "Oh! Poor fellow!" she breathed. "Is he dead?"

"He ought to be." The man spoke harshly. "Anybody who drives an automobile through the night forty miles an hour and runs down a horse and buggy ought to be dead. However, he isn't dead yet."

"Is anyone else hurt?"

The man shrugged his shoulders. "If they were, they're past praying for," he said callously. "The auto went into the river."

The girl glanced at the water and shivered. "Can you get him to the house?" she asked. "We haven't any men about the place."

The man from the buggy had risen and was looking at the girl. She seemed to be about twenty-two or three years old, with clean-cut lips and a well-shaped nose. He could not make out her eyes, but her chin bespoke determination, and he guessed that her eyes might be gray.

"No," he said, considering. "I won't need to trouble you. I can manage, I think." He bent down again, caught the wounded man's arm and drew it over his right shoulder in accordance with the rules for carrying wounded on the battlefield. Then he rose with some difficulty to his feet, lifting the man upon his back, and began to struggle slowly up the slope. The girl followed.

The slope was short and not very steep, but the wounded man was heavy and the rescuer himself was scarcely in condition for the work. However, he went doggedly on until he had nearly reached the top. There he stopped, staggered, and would have fallen backward had not the girl propped him from behind, pushing with a strength altogether unexpected. The timely aid enabled him to step over the crest of the slope onto the road. "Thank you," he murmured gratefully. "You saved us."

Then He Rose With Some Difficulty to His Feet, Lifting the Man Upon His Back, and Began to Struggle Slowly Up the Slope.

"You could have saved yourself," said the girl, "if you had dropped your burden. Why didn't you?" A new respect spoke in her tones.

"I always play the game out if the cards have been dealt," remarked the man, lightly, as with firmer footing he crossed the road and the tracks toward the open gate on the other side. As he passed through it he noticed that someone was standing on the porch, and heard a soft, quivering voice. "Oh, Edith," it called. "What has happened?"

"It's an automobile accident, mother," replied the girl, clearly. "An automobile jumped the bank and plunged into the river and threw out the driver. This gentleman is bringing him in."

The bearer mounted the steps firmly and followed the old lady into the house and the sitting room, where he thankfully let his burden slip from his shoulder to a broad lounge. "Is there a doctor anywhere in the neighborhood?" he asked as he rose.

The girl nodded. "I'll telephone," she said.

She went to a telephone hanging on the wall and gave a number. A moment later she turned around. "Doctor Fox is expected home any minute," she said, "and they will send him over as soon as he comes. He is the only doctor anywhere near. Can't we do something before he comes, Mr.—er—"

"Harrison," responded the man promptly. "Henry Harrison."

"Thank you. I am Edith Grant. Can't we do something, Mr. Harrison?"

Harrison nodded. "I'll try," he answered. He was already feeling the limbs of the wounded man. "One of his legs is broken and he's badly cut about the head. Get a basin of warm water and a sponge, please."

A moment later she was back, bringing the water and basin. While the man straightened the mangled leg, she bathed the cut and bound it up.

A few moments later Doctor Fox arrived. "Good evening, Miss Grant," he said, nodding to the girl, as he bent over the mangled form. "How did it happen?"

Edith Grant glanced at Harrison, and he explained.

"Humph!" The doctor had finished tying up the broken leg. He glanced approvingly at the bandage about the wounded man's temples. Then he opened the muddy and bloodstained shirt and exposed the broad chest.

"Good Lord!" he exclaimed.

At his tone Harrison bent swiftly forward and Miss Grant, who had drawn back a little, turned toward him with a startled face. "What is it, doctor?" quavered the girl.

"Matter?" The doctor was fingering the wounds. "This man has been shot. The bullet went clear through him and came out at his back. He's dying. Who shot him?"

Harrison and the girl looked at each other. Harrison's face was white. He seemed dismayed, perhaps terror-stricken, by the announcement. "I certainly didn't," he blurted out.

"You? Certainly not!" The doctor seemed a little surprised by the hasty disclaimer. "Not unless you were traveling with him. He was shot at least an hour ago. He must have been pretty far gone when he ran into you. Did you find any papers on him?" The doctor was working as he spoke.

"We haven't looked," Harrison spoke calmly. The doctor's assertion that the man had been shot an hour before seemed to restore his poise.

The doctor slipped his hand into the man's pockets and brought to light a purse, a watch and other small articles. At last he drew out a flat packet, carefully corded, but muddy, broken and bloodstained.

Hesitantly he stared at the seals, and then at the man. "I don't like to open this," he said. "I'll try to restore him to consciousness first, anyway." He hesitated, as if doubtful what to do with the packet. When Edith recognized his dilemma she reached out her hand to take it. But he shook his head. "No, thank you," he said. "I'll keep it." He slipped the packet into his pocket, then raised the man's head and poured a few drops of pungent liquor between the contorted lips.

Almost instantly the man opened his eyes and stared around him. "What has happened?" he demanded, striving to struggle up upon his elbow. The intonation of his voice was foreign.

Gently the doctor pressed him back. "Lie still," he ordered. "There's been an accident and you're badly hurt."

Into the man's eyes snapped a look of terror, and he snatched at his breast. "My packet!" he shrieked. "Where is it?"

"It's here!" The doctor thrust the packet into the man's hand. "It's safe. Now you must lie still."

"Still! Still! Good heaven!" The man laughed hoarsely. His fingers closed tightly on the packet. "I will lie still enough soon," he gasped painfully. "I must work now. I must see Henry Archman before I die."

"Henry Archman!" The doctor's eyes met those of Miss Grant. "Mr. Archman lives near here," he said soothingly. "We will send for him at once."

"No! No! I shall go to him." Again the man tried to struggle up. "Where is my car?" he demanded.

"Your car is at the bottom of the river," answered the doctor. "Listen to me. You have been badly hurt. You are dying—"

"I know it. Yes, I knew it when the bullet hit me! They think I shall fall. But I'll fool them! I'll beat them all yet." The man's voice rang with desperation. "I must see Henry," he reiterated.

"So you shall," the doctor promised glibly. "But you must lie still. I will get Mr. Archman for you. But first tell me who shot you."

The man made a gesture of contempt. "What does it matter?" he demanded. "You cannot touch them. They snap their fingers at the law. But Henry can beat them. That will hurt them worse. Get him for me!"

"But—" The doctor still strove to protest.

Edith Grant stepped forward. "Dying men have privileges, doctor," she said. She turned to the man on the couch. "Tell me your name and what to say, and I will telephone to Mr. Archman."

Here's a mystery. Who shot him? And what for? And what does he want of Archman?

Threats

I consider it a mark of great prudence in a man to abstain from threats or any contemptuous expressions, for neither of these weakens the enemy, but threats make him more cautious, and the other excites his hatred, and a desire to revenge himself.—Machiavelli.

Lesson for September 7

JESUS HEALS A NOBLEMAN'S SON

LESSON TEXT—John 4:46-54.

GOLDEN TEXT—"I am the way, the truth, and the life."—John 14:6.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus Heals a Sick Boy.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus Heals a Nobleman's Son.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Belief in Jesus—What It Has Done and Will Do.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—What Should We Expect From Faith?

The glorious revival among the Samaritans being over, Jesus, with heart yearning for His countrymen, goes back into Galilee. When He began His work there it was not appreciated as it should have been. His own testimony is that a prophet hath no honor in his own country. Having made a reputation elsewhere He now came back to them.

I. The Nobleman's Earnest Plea (vv. 46, 47). This father's heart was in deep anguish because of the critical illness of his son, but he had the good sense to go to Jesus in his distress. Parents should eagerly bring their children to the Great Physician. This affliction was used to bring him to Jesus. Many do not think of Jesus until overwhelmed with grief and distress. It is need that always brings men to Jesus. Even when human physicians fail the case is not hopeless, for there is no case too hard for Christ and there is no disease too difficult nor sorrow too great but relief can be found in Him. This is true of our physical ills, but it is pre-eminently true of our souls. We see here that a rich and influential man is in distress, showing that the rich and exalted are no more exempt from afflictions and anxiety than are the poor. Cares and trouble come to all alike. The young are liable to disease and death as are the old. This nobleman learned of Jesus through the testimony of another (v. 47). Had not some one told him about Jesus he would not have called upon Him. Before lost men can call upon the Lord some one must tell them about Him (Rom. 10:14, 15).

II. The Testing of the Nobleman's Faith (vv. 48, 49).

In his experience we find an illustration of the development of belief. He had faith, but not an intelligent faith. Before help could be given his attitude of mind must be changed. Jesus declared, "Except ye see signs and wonders, ye will not believe," showing that the nobleman's faith was such as was based upon signs and wonders. The man needed something more than the healing of his son. He must needs know Christ as Savior as well as healer. He did not allow himself to be put off, but insistently demanded, "Sir, come down ere my child die." This shows that he was now willing to make any experiment to save his boy. His very impotency forced him to lay hold upon the Lord. Jesus desired this man to possess a faith which was based upon His naked word, not mere signs and wonders. The way of Jesus is to first reveal Himself as a Savior and then as a Healer.

III. The Nobleman's Faith Victorious (vv. 50-54).

Through his testing he passed with good advantage. He is now ready to receive the Lord's own word, "Go thy way; thy son liveth." These words created true faith and the man stepped out upon them. Because he believed the words that Jesus spoke unto him he went his way. Faith increases in brightness the longer it is exercised. The foundation upon which he reposed his faith was the words of Jesus. On his return his faith met with confirmation. His servant met him and told him that his son was alive. Upon inquiry he found that the recovery of his son was from the very hour in which Jesus spake the words. This was such an unmistakable evidence of the deity of Jesus that not only the nobleman, but his household, was won for Christ. This affords us an example of the beauty of household religion. May we all learn that the words of Jesus are reliable. That which He promises is just as sure as though it had already come to pass. The salvation of the one who believes in Jesus is just as sure as though he had been in heaven and seen his name in the Book of Life. Anxiety for the son brought salvation to the whole house.

Evangelism

Evangelism is not merely a work of love. It is the sheer law of self-preservation. The heathenism which is creeping along the fences of society is scattering its seeds on both sides. If Christians do not make the world better, the world will surely make the church worse.—Herald of Holiness.

Innocent Revenge

He that has learned with meekness and quietness to forgive injuries and pass them by, has found the best and surest way of baffling and defeating them; nay, it is a kind of innocent revenge.—Matthew Henry.

Only Two Choices

Said an old salt to the young apprentice: "Aboard a man o' war, my lad, there's only two choices. One's duty; 'other's mutiny."—Rev. A. B. Woodburne.

Roots and Herbs Best for Kidneys

Daniel G. Carey, M.D.

BACKACHE

said Dr. Carey is a pretty sure sign that all is not well with your kidneys. Delay may be dangerous—thousands of people die every year from kidney troubles and many could be saved if the right medicine was taken in time.

Dr. Carey knew how to mix roots and herbs and for over 40 years his famous Marshroot Prescription 777 helped thousands of despairing people. It's the one remedy for backache troubles. Don't take chances—ask your druggist for it by name—liquid or tablet form—equally good, 75c. If your local druggist hasn't it he can get it from the Carey Medical Laboratories at Elmira, N. Y.

Does He Fear a Wettin'?

"I see that Sim's new portrait of King George is being severely criticized. What do you think of it?"

"Too much flashy clothes for this time and age."

"Well, I think myself he'd look better without that swell reigncoat he's wearing."

Lucky Criminals

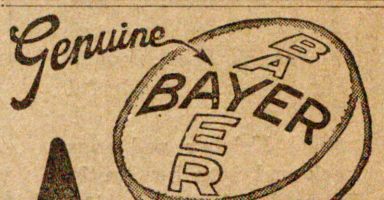

The Braganza, one of the largest diamonds in the world, was found by three criminals, who had been sent into exile among the cannibal tribes and wild beasts in the Brazilian interior. They took the stone to a priest, who turned it over to the governor. The gem became the glory of the crown jewels of Portugal, and the king, in gratitude, pardoned the exiles.

TINLEY PARK

Automobiles are getting to be pretty cheap now days. On Tuesday an Overland touring car which had been left in storage by Fred Johnson at the Peter Parenti place, was sold for storage charges, bringing $49. The car was bought by Ferd. Parenti.

George Schreiber, who has just completed a fine, up-to-date new shoe store and shoe repair shop, expects to move into his new quarters the latter part of this week. Mr. Schreiber will be glad to welcome his patrons in his new quarters and will endeavor at all times to give them the same excellent quality of goods and service as he has given them in the past.

The Zion Lutheran congregation of Tinley Park is making a notable improvement by way of the erection of a fine new modern eight room parsonage, for which the ground has just been broken. The new building is to occupy the site on which the Lutheran parochial school formerly stood. The school building has been moved farther west. The old parsonage has been bought by Rev. Barkow of Milwaukee. The new parsonage, it is expected, will be completed so that Rev. Buddenhagen and family can move in by Christmas.

When our highly esteemed business man, Mr. John C. Funk, celebrated his birthday last week, he said they all had a fine time. The only kick he had coming was that they came so late and it made the night so short, so take a hint and come earlier next time and make the good time last longer.

A REMEDY FOR THE WORLD WOES

He who knows not, and knows not that he knows not, is a fool—shun him.

He who knows not, and knows that he knows not, is dull—teach him.

He who knows, and knows not that he knows, is asleep—wake him. He who knows and knows that he knows, is wise—follow him.

A Persian Proverb.

A GO-GETTER

Chas. G. Dawes doesn't seem to care so much about hot air and technicalities as he does results. This fact was particularly in evidence throughout his service as purchasing agent for our government in France during the war, and in his work in preparing a national budget system.

Dawes struck at the root of the farmers' trouble—lack of a sufficient foreign market—when he framed a reparation plan under which Germany and all of Europe could revive and prosper, for in operation that plan would increase Europe's ability to buy American farm products.

The farmer suffers as much from high prices for what he buys as from low prices for what he sells, and Dawes can analyze the cause in a manner to confound those whose remedy is to hand over the railroads for operation by the government or dopt other schemes.

As a matter of fact, the American farmer and business man have much at stake in the successful acceptance and application of the Dawes plan for settlement of the Germany.

Nobody can enjoy a sojourn of three or four months in Europe with it's difficulties and it's problems, it's suspicions and it's distrusts, it's promise for the future and it's threats, without coming back to the wholesome atmosphere of America pleased as never before that he was born an American and will be permitted to live and die an American.—Owen D. Young.
